DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

1. Claims 1-46,48-54 are allowable over the prior art of record.
2. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:
The independent claims that contain the selection of a coding mode separate with selection of the pitch predictor order, is not explicitly taught by the prior art of record. With respect to the prior art of record, Manjunath (6691084) the concept of determining a coding efficiency, and the selection of the coding mode determines the pitch predictor order, whereas the claim language of the independent claims in the claim list of claims 1-46,48-54 requires the selection of coding method and the pitch predictor order

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.
4. Claims 47 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Matsumoto et al (5819212) in view of Manjunath et al (6691084).

As per claim 47, Matsumoto et al (5819212) teaches coding a audio signal:

“means for coding.....examining a part of the audio signal.....to be coded.....producing a set of predicted.....pitch predictor orders” as LPC analysis (Fig. 1, subblock 130);

“determining a coding efficiency....using the determined coding efficiency.....to be coded....by using information....audio signal to be coded” as band splitting and coding at different rates (fig. 5, col. 10 lines 19-65) and V/UV decisions based on the input signal (col. 11 lines 1-24);

“determining.....error.....prediction signals” as error signal, and choosing the coefficients to reduce such error signal (col. 11 lines 25-40).

Matsumoto et al (5819212) does not explicitly teach using the determined coding efficiency to select a pitch predictor order for the selected coding method by comparing coding efficiencies, however, Manjunath et al (6691084) teaches selecting the pitch predictor order according to the coding mode, wherein the coding efficiencies are determined for that particular type of frame, and hence the predictor order is chosen based on that type of frame (col. 15 line 49 – col. 16 line 11 → NELP, PPP, and CELP; each has a different pitch predictive order that is used according to each coding method). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art of audio coding to modify the teachings of Matsumoto et al (5819212) with using the determined coding efficiency to select a pitch predictor order for the selected coding method because it would improve the coding efficiency of each frame based on the content of each frame (Manjunath, col. 1 line 55 – col. 2 line 9).

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's arguments received 7/21/05 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Claim 47 does not include the final step of when the audio signal is coded based on the predicted signal in the selected coding method.
